SAGINAW MEN VISIT MERCHANTS

150 ENJOY BANQUET AND HEAR INSPIRING TALKS

Saginaw pledged itself to the assistance of Grayling when the two cities clasped the hands of fellowship here Wednesday evening at a dinner meeting at Shoppengans, Inn, where 150 Saginaw business men entertained about 100 retailers of Grayling and vicinity. The meeting represented the completion of the second home-ward lap of the 500-mile good-will tour the Saginawans are making in Northern Michigan under the wholesome merchants of the board of commerce.

"I think I can safely bring to you the assistance of our board of directors," said Charles W. Haensel, president of the Saginaw Board of Commerce, "if you prove to us you are awake to your opportunities. We will always extend our well wishes and any material aid within our power."

In the concluding address of the evening, Mr. Haensel advised the local group that the future prosperity of their community rests with them and suggested methods of forging ahead to success.

Last of three dinner meetings of the trip at Alpena, Cheboygan and Grayling, the session was the visitors claimed, the most enthusiastic of all and proved the traveling wholesalers' effort toward tightening the bonds of friendship to the north is growing daily. Besides Mr. Haensel, the speakers were: Vincent J. Byerlein, president of the wholesale bureau; Marius Hanson, Grayling banker; J. George O'Brien, general manager of the Automobile club of Northern Michigan; Thomas Marston of Bay City; Rev. John W. Greenwood, pastor of the Michigan Memorial church, Grayling; and W. W. Lewis, president of the Grayling Board of Trade.

"Profits come from thoughts," said Haensel in every walk of life. "Mr. Haensel told the local retailers, 'When you pool your brains and show unity of effort, you build confidence in your fellowmen who will be on the quickest road to prosperity. Group effort is the thing we all need to better our positions in the business life of the nation.'"

The valley city commercial executive said old ideas in retailing are passing and that accessories to success, such as advertising, window display, and other technical matters pertaining to the retail trade.

In a casual comment upon chain store competition he assured his audience that the cost of operating the chains is quite as great, if not in excess of the cost of operating the individual establishments. In many districts it is known to be seven percent higher, he said, due to greater rental, maintenance of general offices and a larger pay roll.

"You people here in Grayling have more brain power than any chain store system in the United States," he continued, "and I urge you to sit down and study your problems together. Think of the advantages you have over outside competitors. Recall that the profits of a store do not go to Chicago or New York or some other center but go toward building your city and beautifying it. Your profits—Grayling mothers are interested in this—go toward educating your children and not the children of persons unknown to you."

Mr. Byerlein, who as president of the board, presided at the meeting, welcomed the Grayling men around the dinner table with their down-state firms, relating the hard efforts of Saginaw to attain the position the city now holds in the business world. He also regretted the forced absence, due to illness, of Rasmus Hanson, donor of the 160-acre reservation now used by the Michigan National Guard near here.

Marius Hanson, nephew of Rasmus Hanson, said his dealings with Saginaw men always entailed pleasure, and pointed out that the presence of the junketers proved Saginaw as interested in the up-state neighbors. He said, in reference to lumbering, that Saginaw had stripped this section of one of its greatest resources but that this vicinity might soon be a competitor of Saginaw in the lumber operations.

Mr. O'Brien, the versatile member of the Saginaw party who has been acting as humorist, was equally funny in previous talks and in addition he provided new jokes to "relieve" the suffering of the boys who are forced to listen to me twice a day.

"Michigan is the playground of the nation, and we men of Bay City and Saginaw are alert to help in advertising the state as such," said Mr. Marston, who as official of the North-Eastern Michigan Tourist Association. He also lauded Saginaw's interest in the north country as shown by the trip and said his presence among the Saginaw men proved they held no brief for persons from neighboring cities who also are interested in the Wolverine northlands.

"I'm glad to see this token of good will and fraternity between the two cities," said Rev. Greenwood, who was a sergeant in the Canadian army during the World War. "One of the greatest weaknesses confronting the country is its lack of cooperation, but I believe we folks of Michigan are anxious to overcome this hindrance to progress."

Mr. Lewis, in official capacity as president of Grayling Board of Trade, said the latesting of Grayling was always out to Saginaw residents and added that in his estimation, Saginaw has not only lost none of its old-time alertness, but is attaining even greater laurels in this respect. He applauded the forcefulness of the younger men as expressed in the evening's community singing, which preceded the meeting under the leadership of William A. Rosko, secretary of the bureau, and chairman of the junket expedition.

John Pomyeok, a member of the board, presented a letter of introduction for which acknowledgment was played by Allan Leehr, whose orchestra furnished the dinner music. Art Parnish and Art Freimuth, members of the orchestra, entertained with character songs and the individual players appeared in instrumental solos.

Mr. Smith's talk was the shortest of the evening. He sincerely welcomed the Grayling school system activities. After the meeting, the wholesalers were welcomed at the Board of Trade club rooms and were invited to use the Grayling golf course Thursday morning before departure. Several played on the new link at Gaylord Wednesday afternoon, and welcomed the chance to even score.

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES AT FREDERIC A SUCCESS

Commencement, the most interesting event of the season, was introduced by Rev. Young of Gaylord, who gave the Baccalaureate address. The sermon was especially good and replete with most excellent advice for young people. Mr. Young emphasized the class motto, "The elevator to success is made by running the stairs." He stressed the importance of the minds of the class the truth of the statement.

This was the first time in the history of the school that Class night exercises had been observed and an unusual large audience turned out to listen, not only to this, but to the Commencement program.

We are only doing justice to those who took part on the programs when we say that each one delivered his or her part exceptionally well and earned the hearty applause of the audience. The Etude, by Chopin, piano, rendered by Miss Anna May Lewis, and the solo, "A Journey," by Miss Marie Schmidt, received enthusiastic applause and they were recipients of many favorable comments. Several who were especially well qualified to judge marveled that one so young as Miss Schmidt should have such a melodious voice.

The Lincoln medal was presented to Miss Doris Corsaut by Prof. F. E. Robinson, head of the commercial department at Mount Pleasant. The Commencement address to the class was also given by Prof. Robinson. He took as his subject, "Live Wires," and gave one of the most interesting and helpful addresses to which the people of Grayling have ever listened. This is the fourth time that Mr. Robinson has been invited to our town and his advice is always most inspiring and helpful.

The diplomas were granted to the class in a most fitting manner by Secretary C. S. Barber, and this ended our educational work for another year.

Eight Grade Diplomas Presented A special part of the Commencement program in Frederic was the presentation of Eight grade diplomas to the students of Maple Forest and Frederic townships. The diplomas were presented by R. D. Bailey, County Agricultural Agent of Crawford County.

Mr. Bailey advised this class of young people not to become quitters and urged them to continue to work hard for a higher education that would best fit them to serve humanity. The class seemed very much interested in judging from the expression on their faces, they will follow his advice.

WATERWORKS QUESTION WINS

CARRIES BY VOTE OF 206 TO 29

The special election held last Monday for the purpose of determining whether or not the village should purchase the waterworks system of Salling Hanson Company carried by a vote of 206 to 29. This will give the village council the authority to go ahead and buy the plant according to the terms specified in their proposal to the company.

The village is to pay Salling Hanson Company the sum of $5,000 for the present system including all pipe lines, the pumping equipment building and land sufficient for wells and standpipes. While the election carried by a good majority, still there was some opposition for one reason or another. It seems that this proposal was the best that has ever been submitted to the property owners of the city, according to the opinion of some of those who have given the matter considerable study and thought. The council had carefully figured out the project and it was their unanimous belief that this plan was the best. It required a two-third majority to pass or 157 votes, thus giving a majority of 49 votes.

The Council met Monday night, at which time the village clerk was di-

A Thought for The Week

"I did not know that children of their age could feel so deeply. When they laugh, they laugh. So like the sunlight, so like running water."

I did not know that when they wept their wee

Could tap the same cold, deep, eternal springs.

That feed our older grief.

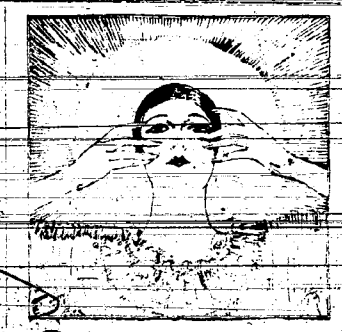

I grieve in darkness. Youth baughters me."—From Heart of Youth.

In the light of the thought of this poem, let us show fine discrimination

In facing the problem of youth.

Woodrow Wilson used to say, "It is just as hard to do your duty when men are sneering at you as when they are shooting at you." Youth needs our sympathetic understanding more and our criticism less.

rected to write the owners that they were ready to go ahead and complete the transaction. Just as soon as this is done the village will proceed to procure electric power for operation and make other necessary changes. The present plan is to reconstruct some of the present pipe lines just as fast as finances will enable them to do so, without having to bond the village in order to raise the money. The Council feels that enough money can be raised by taxation each year to take care of the improvements. The usual outcome in cases where bonds are issued is that the community has to pay out as much for interest as it does for the principal. As a measure of economy to the taxpayer the Council appears to have acted wisely, and we believe that in the near future too, that we will have a waterworks system that is going to be all that anyone could hope for.

FLAG DAY CELEBRATIONS

Hundreds of American communities have responded to the suggestion that the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the adoption of the American flag by the Continental Congress be observed with special exercises on June 14th.

These celebrations will take many forms—school exercises, parades of school children, civic and military organizations, sunrise, afternoon and evening exercises, and general display of the flag from homes and business houses.

The National Republic has printed and distributed several thousand copies of a pamphlet making suggestions for the organization and conduct of such celebrations.

In no community in the land should June 14th pass without some appropriate recognition of this day. There is definite patriotic value in public demonstrations of this kind at a time when all that the American flag stands for is being assailed from so many quarters.

STOP THIS PRACTICE

The business district is considered legitimate prey for any scheme which any one may have thought out as a source of profit. An individual who writes a pamphlet promoting something of doubtful value for selfish gain or a group that wants to buy lands for the Indians or sunbonnets for the Eskimos, descends on the business district and proceeds to harvest the denizens thereof. Some schemes are worthy of support, while others are undervalued and valueless. It would be well if business men would get together and select a committee to investigate proposed schemes and pass on their merits, giving approval if they are deserving and withholding endorsement if they are worthless or unbecoming. This method would give support where it is deserved and save time devoted to consideration which is necessarily hasty and often faulty. Thus, when anyone has a scheme which he hopes to enrich himself or draw a great cause, he could present it to a committee of business men, and the time and energy of the community would be saved. The committee would then be able to listen and analyze, and then results could be passed on to the individuals in the business group. Wayne (Nebraska) News.

FORMER RESIDENT BROUGHT HERE FOR BURIAL

The remains of Joseph Morency, a former resident of Grayling, were brought here Monday and taken to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Vailad. Services were held the following morning at St. Mary's church, Rev. Fr. Culligan officiating.

Mr. Morency passed away at his home in Detroit on June 4th, after being ill since January, part of the time being confined in a Detroit hospital. About a year ago the family moved to Detroit, after having resided in Grayling for 12 years. Previous to that time they had lived in Maple Forest township for 28 years, so that the family was well and favorably known in this county. Most of their children were educated in our schools, and were growing to manhood and womanhood most of them left Grayling and have since married.

The deceased is survived by his wife, two sons and five daughters, Alfred and Leo Morency, Mrs. Charles Ames, Mrs. Frank Bracken, Mrs. Thomas Craig, all of Detroit, Mrs. Howard Smith and Mrs. Robert Churchill of Pontiac.

All of the above, together with their wives and husbands and families, came to be in attendance at the funeral, all returning home Tuesday, excepting Mrs. Joseph Morency and sons, Alfred and Leo, who remained until Wednesday.

The family have the sincere sympathy of their friends in this community in their sorrow.

TATTLINGS

Folk. Says I to myself, well, to day is the day to get a real rest in a sensible way. I'll tune up the car and I'll take all my gang an' I'll let all the worry and such things go hang.

Cause the kids and the wife are all glad to agree, so they pile in the bus in a hurry, and the thought of a trip in the out-of-doors brightens the sort of an outing that just hits me right.

We ramble along on a wonderful street and I'm dodgin' the millions of autos we meet. The traffic is wild and it shortly appears that the buzz and honking will deafen my ears. It is tant, but shucks, all the others are doin' the same. An untraveled highway? Fate laughs in my face, and I find, like all dryders, there is no such place.

We finally get home and I smile when I think how the plans for a rest-up have come on the blink. My nerves are on edge and my eyesight is spindly. I'm a blamed more tired than I was when I went.

My mother thinks that father ought to always have the best, and she has got him so he thinks he's better'n all the rest. She gets his evening paper out when he comes home at night, and draws around his easy chair and tries to use him right. And when we all sit down to eat, she never blinks a lash. But hands him out some chicken, and helps us kids to hash.

My mother says that home should be in our affections first, but father thinks it's just the place for him to get the worst. When he's in town he jokes and laughs, and uses people kind, but when he starts for home at night he looks like a smile behind his ears about the dinner, and he calls the victuals trash, so mother cooks him chicken and fills us up on hash.

But after father's rested and has his evening smoke, he always feels lots better and he likes to play and joke. He helps us with our lessons, and he does it in a way that makes them entertaining and seems just as plain as day. And sometimes when we go to bed, he hands us out some cash. So let him have his chicken, we'll get along with hash.

You won't find many of the young people these days who are shy, but you will find plenty who are shy among those who foot the young people's bills.

The only reason flappers don't powder their noses more often on the streets is because the mirrors on the sidewalk scales and gum vending machines are not closer together.

Hen Peck went up to Judge Howells' office Saturday an' says to him, "I'd like to have you get a divorce for me, judge," says he. "What is your grounds?" the judge says. "Well," says Hen, "I've been a livin' with Sarah now for going on fourteen years," he says, "an' hain't I really entitled to a rest?" says he.

The professor was asked to give his definition of a woman. After clearing his throat he began in a melodramatic way. "Woman is, generally speaking," "Stop right there, professor," interrupted a lowbrow. "If you talked a thousand years you'd never get any nearer to it than that."

MRS. MARY GOWDROW PASSED AWAY AT DURAND

Mrs. Mary Goudrow, wife of the late John O. Goudrow, formerly well known shoe dealer of Grayling, passed away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Jake Collins at Durand, Sunday morning. Mrs. Goudrow had been ailing for a long time, but had only been confined to her bed about a month when the end came. Some time ago she suffered a broken arm, which caused her a lot of pain and discomfort and tended to make her more feeble.

Mrs. Goudrow before her marriage was Miss Mary Ellen Sheridan. She was born in Toronto and was about 38 years old at the time of her death. In 1890 she was united in marriage to Mr. Goudrow at Otsego Lake, where he was conducting a shoe store, this place at that time being a thriving lumbering town. In 1893 the family moved to Grayling, and following the burning of their shoe business and home on Cedar street in 1902, they purchased the property on the corner of Michigan and Peninsular avenues, where Mr. Goudrow operated a shoe store and the family lived until Mr. Goudrow's death on May 6, 1924. At that time Mrs. Goudrow went to make her home with her daughter, Mrs. Collins, and also spent some time in Detroit with the Scott-Lander family.

Mrs. Goudrow led a most exemplary life; she was most devoted to the Catholic faith and when young was most active in the affairs of St. Mary's church of which she was a member, also being a member of the St. Vincent's society. She never complained and was ever ready to lend a helping hand in time of need. Mrs. Goudrow had many old friends in Grayling, who were grieved to learn of her demise.

The remains were brought to Grayling Tuesday and the funeral held Wednesday morning from St. Mary's church. A requiem high mass was celebrated by Rev. Fr. Culligan. The church choir, rendering the mass hymns, interment was in Elmwood cemetery beside the remains of her husband.

Surviving the deceased are one daughter, Mrs. Dessa Collins and five grandchildren, all of Durand. Mrs. Goudrow was grandmother of John and Bernard Conklin, who make their home with their aunt, Mrs. Collins, since the death of their mother, Mrs. Josephine Conklin, in April, 1925. Also six step-children survive. Mrs. W. A. Senay of Linwood, Capt. Frank Goudrow, Mrs. Scott Lander and Goudrow, Detroit; Mrs. George Tobin, Bay City, and Mrs. Mary Theris, New York.

Those accompanying the remains here were Mr. and Mrs. Collins and daughter Violet, of Durand; Mrs. Scott Lander and Mrs. Frank Goudrow, Detroit; Mrs. W. A. Senay, Linwood.

Farm Bureau Notes

H. D. Bailey, Co. Agricultural Agent

"There is that scattereth, and yet increaseth; and there is that withholdeth more than he meet, but it leadeth to poverty."—Proverbs, 11th chapter, 24th verse.

Too Poor

Often, after showing certain farmers, beyond a doubt, that they should, and could, use better farm practices, your county agent is met with this answer, "Yes, your plans look all right, and sound all right, but I am too poor to follow them."

The answer is generally intended to excuse the farmer who gives it, for all the poor management that he is then indulging in, as well as to excuse him from making many and intelligent effort in the future.

The writer believes that the answer, "too poor" is a mere excuse given by the one who gives it, to let him off from making decent effort. The answer "too poor" is used so much, and stands so big in the path of progress that we feel that it is a big hindrance to getting many things done on Crawford county farms that inspection shows plainly should be done, and could be done, on those farms.

As long as such an answer is often used, and glibly used, one county agent or ten agents together will not be able to do much with the farmers who have settled back into a deep rut from which they don't see whether they escape or not.

The answer "too poor" so completely paralyzes initiative and effort that those farmers, who delude themselves by using it so often and so freely, thereby sign the door of opportunity in their own faces.

Let's give this "too poor" talk a little examination.

In the first place, your county agent has been through the mill himself, troubled as much with run-down farm, poor health, debt and lack of equipment, an any farmer who can show, however, he was filled with a chuck full of a determination not to let that way.

If there ever was a county agent who had a practical, and not a visionary nature, and who could sympathize with farmers in their troubles, it seems as if it would be the writer of this article.

Farming at Grayling in a climate certainly no more favorable to farming than the climate Crawford county farmers enjoy, right at the time when he was trying to get started, and needed things in his favor, he went through years of dry weather, failure of hay crops to catch or mature, grasshoppers, and pestilence, low prices for crops, and our only cash crop. The writer knows what it is, while trying to get started, to sell the whole potato crop at six cents a bushel, delivered, and severely sorted. He knows what it is to sell the whole crop at nine cents a bushel; another year at fifteen cents, another at sixteen, and another at twenty-one cents.

These things are stated simply to show that this agent knows what hard experiences are, and that he has a fellow-feeling for others who may have the same trouble.

Your agent knows the difference between practical, and to advocate methods that will work and prove helpful, and that can be employed, not by a few, but by those down at the bottom of the ladder.

The thing to make sure of is: Is a farmer "too poor" in pocketbook only, or "too poor" in spirit and in lack of spunk, gumption, ideas, ambition. Let's name a few things that would be for the good of many farms and that even the "poorest" can do, if they have the ideals, grit and ambition to do so.

The list will not be complete, but would help a whole lot on many farms within the county.

(1) The condition of the soil. This is deplorable in far too many cases. The farmer has taken and taken from the land, year after year, and has put back little. Crops, taken from 40 acres are concentrated into a marginally fertile soil.

Farmers use green manure crop to help the land that he cannot manure. The farm begins to slip back.

The farm may be in such a condition that clover will no longer "catch," and he may be "too poor" to buy lime to make it "catch." But if he is not "too poor" in mind he can turn to a short rotation, and get green manure to plow in by sowing rye or vetch and the corn just before the last cultivation. This will be large enough to do the soil great good when plowed under about the end of the following May, for hill corn, fodder corn, or potatoes.

We are not going to admit that there is a farmer in the county "too poor" to do the above for his soil.

(2) Several pounds of root seed (rutabagas, purple-top, yellow Aberdeen turnips) could be sowed with the grass seed, and hundreds of bushels of valuable roots secured for winter feed, without even the trouble of even hoeing the roots once. But it is done by only a few.

(3) A man may be "too poor" to buy a silo, but not too poor to raise and give good care to an acre of cultivated roots, which would make a difference of several hundred dollars in the winter's return from the cows.

Yet we see almost no roots in the county. No farmer is "too poor" to sow an acre of Dwarf Essex rape for pasture at a cost of less than 50 cents for seed for the whole acre.

(4) No farmer is "too poor" to put a fence around the sides of the silo, rowing pen, and thus save pigs worth five dollars each.

(5) No farmer is "too poor" to fence off a night lot, in which the cows shall be yarded at night one summer, putting the manure where it can be used the next year for a piece of roots or fodder corn. No brother, it is not because you are "too poor" that you have not done these easy and sensible things. There is a far different reason.

(6) There may be a difference of opinion as to whether a farmer can afford to buy grain to feed his cows on pasture; but no farmer is "too poor" to have an acre of fodder corn growing handy near the barn, perhaps in last year's night lot, to cut green for the cows, day by day, to help call them home, and to keep up the flow of milk.

(7) It is not poverty that keeps farmers from treating seed oats with formaldehyde to prevent smut.

(8) It is not poverty of the pocketbook anyway that keeps farmers from hill selecting the best potatoes from the best yielding hills at digging time for next year's seed. It may be poverty of ambition or of ideals, but not of the "too poor" kind.

(9) It is not because he is "too poor" that a farmer breeds his hogs and cows to scrub sires, and gets scrub offspring.

(10) It is not poverty that keeps you can afford to buy commercial fertilizer, but no farmer is "too poor" that he needs to let tons of liquid manure run through barn floors, and be lost in barnyards that he will never crop. It is lack of good management.

(12) No farmer is "too poor" to thoroughly summer fallow a field, to rid it of weeds.

(13) Untidiness of the premises will not help a farmer prosper; yet many act as if they thought that they did not do a thing for the looks of the fence rows, barnyard, dooryard, until they "get well off." No farmer is "too poor" to grade and grass over his dooryard, and to set trees and clumps of beautiful shrubs that he can find free in the woods. Each season the writer notices many choice wild shrubs that would beautify any farm yard.

(14) No farmer is "too poor" to cull his poultry, so that he will not waste feed on hens that have passed their day of usefulness.

(15) No farmer is "too poor" to allow the county agent to test the milk of his cows for butterfat. Yet the agent often has difficulty in securing the permission of the owner to make the test.

(16) No farmer is "too poor" to weigh the milk of his cows, to aid in finding those that do not pay.

Let us farmer friends, drop this "too poor" talk. The worst kind of poverty is that of the mind and ambition. Let us study to become good managers; to become good farmers, good homemakers, so that the appearance of the farm is a comfort to the family and a credit to the neighborhood.

Chicago barber has installed a radio for the benefit of his customers. Sometimes one wonders if even a radio can compete with a barber for continuity in conversation.

The Chinese are reported to be stripping their victims of their clothes. Still up to their old tricks, one of 'em down in Ann Arbor has a shirt that belongs to Ann.

Only the extremely skillful can defy public opinion without getting crushed.

INDUSTRIAL REVIEW

(Written for Crawford Avalanche)

Business on the whole needs a good deal of cheering up. The present level of activity compares very favorably with that of a year ago. However, all lines and all units in the same line are not participating alike either in the good volume of business or the satisfactory earnings that are being enjoyed in the aggregate.

There are evidences of some modification in the general business activity during the new year, but the same general condition during the corresponding period in the past four years. Seasonal influences, as much as anything else, are contributing to this condition. Whatever slowing up takes place will be moderate and temporary. Fundamental conditions continue to give rise to the assurance that business will continue to go forward in large volume.

On the unfavorable side of the picture we find the oil industry in a difficult position on account of overproduction, the bituminous coal strike entering the third month without any indication of an early settlement, cotton selling at low prices, business failures on the increase, political and financial difficulties in the far East, continued slowness in the woolen goods industry and great devastation by floods in the South.

On the other side of the picture we find weekly car loadings of raw cotton reaching the million-car mark for the seventh time this year, which goes to prove that distribution is taking place at a rapid pace; the value of building contracts awarded this far is equal to those in the same period of last year; our foreign trade for the first four months of 1932 reached $60,000,000 ahead of the same period in 1931; the general level of farm prices has turned upward; life insurance sales are substantially ahead of those of a year ago; the dollar is holding its own against the foreign exchange market.

It is not going to be a year of record-breaking achievements, but it is a year of steady progress. The purchasing power of the dollar is 8.6 per cent greater than it was last year; commodity prices give signs of stabilizing; steel production continues on a satisfactory level; there is an abundant supply of money for business purposes; a high and well sustained purchasing power generally throughout the country. Furthermore, an immense amount of materials must be purchased in order to rebuild the highways, bridges, levees, and other structures destroyed by the Mississippi floods, all of which will furnish employment for a large number of people.

Spot prices also prevail in the Michigan business situation. Some factories are working on a full capacity basis, others are operating at normal or better, while still others are experiencing a decline in production. The generally attributed seasonal influences, but by large the industries within the state are well occupied and are giving a good account of themselves. Production generally is expected to hold up well during the summer months and to quicken its pace in the early autumn. Increases were reported during May in shipments of canned goods, forest products, furniture, machinery and paper. The Port Huron railway reports a greater volume of traffic in and out of the Detroit, Flint and Lansing areas during the first five months of 1932 than for the same period last year. Traffic passing through the Saginaw River-Macomb bridge to June first totaled 12,373,138 tons compared with 10,159,361 tons for the corresponding interval in 1931.

The automobile industry continues to occupy the most prominent position in the discussions of the business world. While business figures for May were yet available, preliminary estimates place the output at not far from the number of units turned out in April. Schedules will be reduced during the next six weeks to two months while factory changes are being made preparatory to bringing out new models which will appear in the latter part of the year. Very sharp price reductions are being announced. In fact, the present tendency is to lay more emphasis on good quality and improved models rather than to slash prices. Overseas shipments are showing consistent gains. Production of trucks is steadily increasing.

The industrial employment situation during May was satisfactory. Employment was on an upward trend in Ann Arbor, East Lansing, Grand Rapids, Flint, Jackson, Lansing, Monroe, Muskegon, Pontiac, Huron, Sault Ste. Marie, Standish and Saginaw. Decreases were reported by a few cities, but the total for the state was an over-supply of labor at Flint. Agricultural activities, highway construction and city improvements are absorbing a large amount of common labor.

Building construction throughout the state is reasonably satisfactory. The outlook is reported fair to good. Eleven correspondents report a housing shortage.

Cold, rainy weather has curtailed the sale of spring merchandise. Both wholesale and retail trade, however, are reported fair to good. More seasonal weather should reflect in immediate improvement in retail demand. The tourist business is getting under way and should stimulate business considerably during the next few months. Collections generally are fairly encouraging.

Excessive rainfall and low temperatures have delayed seeding of crops in the upper part of the state. In the southern part the rains have been beneficial, particularly in the cotton belt. The outlook for the Michigan farmers is good. Dairying is on the increase and will tend to further stabilize the farm industry in Michigan.

A full page advertisement in four colors, inside the front cover, advertising the recreational advantages of East Michigan, appears in the current issue of the American Motorist, the official organ of the A. A. A. The issue also contains motor logs of trips in Michigan.

Some people seem to get a good deal out of life by not expecting too much.

ARE YOU A SENSIBLE WOMAN? It may astonish the housekeepers of this country to learn that more fires occur in homes, and that most fires start in kitchens. The loss and damage to homes insured by fire insurance companies is about $65,000,000 a year, a very large percentage being preventable. About 15,000 persons are burned to death each year in the United States, a majority of the victims being women and children.

An educational leaflet issued by the National Board of Fire Underwriters observes that the numerous fatalities due to carelessness in handling of matches, gas, kerosene, gasoline, electrical attachments and numerous other articles, make it astonishing that any sensible woman would use kerosene or gasoline to accelerate a sluggish fire.

Jas. McNeven, accompanied by his daughter, Miss Ruth and Mrs. Kathryn Brown and Evelyn Wood met with an auto accident Sunday morning near Houghton Lake. Unknown to Mr. McNeven, one of his things went flat and the first thing he knew his car swerved in the road two or three times, and then headed for a fence on the other side of a narrow ditch. Luckily, none of the occupants were injured, but the car was badly damaged, the front axle being broken and radiator punctured. Dr. R. E. Goslow, who has been in Detroit since the middle of April, having gone there at that time with intentions of locating there, has found the prospects good and so while in Grayling recently announced the giving up of his chiropractor practice in this vicinity. Dr. Goslow is very efficient in his line, but as the territory is limited he did not feel that he could afford to remain, although he enjoyed a good practice very much. He is a progressive young man and brimming over with ambition so that he is eager to get into larger fields. Dr. Goslow's leaving Grayling is a source of regret to many. He was very active in church and Sunday school work in the Michelson Memorial church, having been superintendent of the Sunday school and taking much interest in the church as a whole. In the past two seasons he successfully put over fifteen courses, spending much of his time drafting advertising schemes and other means to bring this matter before the public. This meant a great deal to the people of Grayling in general, who receive the benefits from these high class entertainments. Dr. Goslow has the best wishes of the people of Grayling, friends in his new location.

Collen's Inn has taken on a most attractive appearance this season and for beauty and comfort one will have to go a long ways to find any better. Manager George Collen has been busy for weeks remodeling, repainting and redecorating the interior of the building so that we doubt if there is a more attractive resort place in the north. The T-Shoppe is already for the opening date, with Mrs. Collen and Mrs. A. M. Lewis in charge. This was opened only last year, but the ladies had a most successful season, having earned money for a beautiful fair. Many improvements have been made in this department also. Leo E. Schram and his new Ramblers Orchestra have been engaged again this season to furnish music, and Manager Schram is busy making arrangements to have it better than ever. Next Wednesday night is the date of the opening party, and a large crowd is expected, as advertising has been distributed in all places surrounding Grayling. Let's boost our home resort and thus help it grow to be one of the most famous in the North.

DURSTONE COMPANY BUILDS MARBLE FRONT

Evidences of the start of the Durstone Co. to get to manufacturing in reality is born out by the installation of the new "Marble" front that is being installed for the City Restaurant.

This front has been extended to the walk-line, and new plate glass windows now grace the place, adding a very pleasing appearance. Beneath the windows and on the outside corner are large slabs that are excellent imitations of genuine marble.

This is the first job of its kind. The Durstone Co. has come out and it is something a lot of attention because of its beauty and also because of the durability it assures. The slabs are white with lines of black blending throughout.

The company is also putting out a line of lawn and yard ornaments that promise to create a large demand. Among the latter are bird baths. These stand about three or four feet in height with a thirty-inch bowl mounted upon a heavy pedestal. They are made in imitation of the various shades of domestic and imported marble and are extremely handsome. Also lawn urns in a number of shapes and of material like that used for the bird baths.

These articles are only a beginning of a long list of things the Durstone Co. intends to manufacture. While it may seem to be slow in getting started, yet the management and directors feel that it is better to go slowly and with confidence rather than to make any costly mistakes. The business seems to be built upon substantial lines and has prospect of becoming one of our best.

So very many have been doing five days work and scattering it over six days.

GRAND RAPIDS WALTONITES TOWNSHIP ASSESSMENT ROLLS DENOUNCE SAVAGE

From Grand Rapids Press

The expected battle at the noon-day meeting of Dwight Lydell chapter of the 12th Waltons league at the Elks temple Friday noon failed to develop, when the local chapter went unanimously on record as supporting the state conservation commission in the matter of revoking the famous fishing order on the Pine River. Marquette and AuSable rivers.

It had been proposed before the meeting that a heated discussion would follow the attempt of the local chapter to take a stand on the controversy which is at present rocking the state organization, and which began when H. A. Savage, newly elected state president, sent out a letter a few days ago in which he condemned the conservation commission's action, and urged all chapters to go on record as favoring a continuation of the bait fishing ban.

Meeting Is Peaceful

Friday's meeting entirely given over to a discussion of the matter, but complete harmony reigned. Only two members could be found to defend the fishing order at all, and even they agreed that the matter had been settled by the conservation commission after due consideration, and that any criticism of the action taken was at this time entirely out of place. The vote against supporting Savage's stand was unanimous.

It was pointed out that Savage had overstepped his position in this matter and members declared his attitude would do the league more harm in Michigan than anything that has ever happened in its history. A resolution was passed urging that such matters in the future be referred to the state executive committee before any action is taken.

Copies of the resolutions will be sent to all chapters in the state and to the conservation department.

Health News

(By the County Nurse)

The magic word vacation! One hears it everywhere now, for school is nearly at an end and plans are being made for the summer. Everything has to be planned and ordered, even the time we have in which to do just as we please.

Vacations serve a two-fold purpose: to recover from the past year's hard work, and to prepare for the ensuing year's activities. For the school children this is a real job, though they are not aware of a vacation being anything but happy release from school so that they can play endlessly.

Nevertheless, there is no denying that they are storing up strength and reserve energy for next year's hard study, and we must remember that each succeeding year of school requires more rigid study than the previous one.

What are the things that make a child ready for school? One of them is immunity to disease. There is no place on earth where a child is as exposed to disease as the school. We have been so busy with the pro and con of toxin-antitoxin that we have become dangerously indifferent to small-pox vaccination.

It is hard to believe that not more than 150 years ago such sayings as, "Don't be vaccinated. It will make your head grow too big and you'll look like a cow," were whispered from person to person throughout the civilized world. Together with other abhorred notions the prevention of the immediate use of one of the greatest benefactors the human race has ever received was accomplished.

The simple statement of an obscure doctor, who had labored for years to convince the world that small-pox was not a bad disease, but a good one, has saved scores from which mankind had never suffered, started an endless chain of discussions and agreements. It almost divided the world into two factions—the vaccinationists and the anti-vaccinationists. This seems almost unbelievable to-day, but it is a fact that the houses of the vaccinationists in Boston and elsewhere were besieged by mobs and dear old Cotton Mather's proposition of vaccination was about as popular in Boston as a horse thief after the Civil War.

Since Jenner's time the history of small-pox has been the history of vaccination. Wherever vaccination has been practiced faithfully, small-pox has been a place of minor importance. Where it has been neglected, and people forgot both the danger of infection and the weapon against it that Edward Jenner gave the world, it has broken out to take its toll of human life and suffering.

Every few years the newspapers tell of a small-pox epidemic somewhere. Such an epidemic awakens people to the calamity of neglect. Vaccination is then faithfully practiced and the disease vanishes until carelessness again summons it to the fore.

Health authorities tell us that it is not at all improbable that small-pox will begin to take gradually heavier tolls each year unless people mend their ways. They back up their assertions with figures such as this: "There were nearly twice as many cases of small-pox in America during 1924 as there were during 1923, due to the increasing number of unvaccinated people."

You owe it to your children, your whole family, and the community not to become careless about this. Have your children vaccinated this summer before school starts so that they are protected against this virulent, ugly disease. They have a right to good health just as they have a right to a good name.

MAINTENANCE IN GRAYLING

It would startle Grayling to find that 10 per cent of its children were seriously underweight, indicating malnutrition. Such a state of affairs is sometimes disclosed when a town believes itself a place of healthy people.

Not far from the Great Lakes, for instance, is a city where the authorities used to consider nutrition "all talk." But a school official became interested. After some persuasive work it was decided to weigh and measure the children just as an experiment. Such a startling disclosure of underweight occurred that the school board was forced to act.

Nearly half the children of that town suffered from malnutrition. It is Grayling sure that malnutrition is not one of its problems? Even if it may not be thought that such is the case, make certain. Follow it up and find out. No town wants such a big percentage of its children in the hands of the "test cannot be made with the smaller children before they go to school, it can be done with those in the grade and high schools. Have them weighed, for example. Are they the average weight for their height and age? A girl seven years of age should weigh about thirty-six pounds; if four inches taller, she should be about six pounds heavier. A boy of the same age forty-one inches in height should weigh about thirty-eight pounds; and when forty-four inches should also be about forty-four pounds. Every inch in height in childhood is a very rough estimate adds from two to four pounds in weight.

Tables of height and weight for age are easily obtainable both for children and adults. That's one of the criteria by which malnutrition may be judged. Anyone more than ten per cent underweight for height is in a very bad way. If anything is wrong, it inevitably means lowered resistance to disease and probably faulty bone development, as well as defective teeth because the body is not obtaining the material it wants for growth and health.

Just by looking around you can also judge whether Grayling's children are well nourished. Have they strong, straight bones, healthy teeth that will last a lifetime, firm, well built muscles, a moderate amount of body fat that makes good padding, but is not "flabby?"

It is no reflection on the prosperity of the town to say that malnutrition is a thing that is not new. It is a thing that a mother in a poor home may know the principles of nutrition and while feeding her children on the least expensive foods may yet give them the right diet so that they are splendid specimens. On the other hand, in a well-to-do home there is the money to indulge the boys and girls in the very things they should not have and malnutrition results. Often, the most poorly nourished children come from homes where there is no stint of money. They have tea, coffee, candies, sweet cakes, pickles, instead of the wholesome whole grain cereals, fruit and green vegetables.

How does Grayling come out in the tests for malnutrition?

JUST "OH" WILL GET YOU INTO TROUBLE

(By Erwin Greer, President Greer College of Automotive & Electrical Trades, Chicago, Ill.)

If every car owner would keep his car supplied with the best oils and greases adapted to it, seventy per cent of the sea of troubles that motor cars are now running in need never be taken up against them.

Suppose we take a typical case of the place that kills. You trot your splendid wagon out on its first few thousand miles, driving pretty carefully for the first thousand, so's not to burn her up. You don't mind watching the oil gauge, and when it drops low, you run into a station and get her to shoot you a quart or two of oil.

"Light or medium?" asks the man in overalls.

"Oh, medium, I guess," you say, because "medium" sounds like a good average. For the rest your selection depends on the kind of oil the station man happens to pull up to his pump.

You happen to pull up to a pump where the attendant is a fellow named "3000." Tumbles into place on the speedometer, and then, "grip!"

The rest of the story is short enough. A bit of synthetic muck stopped the flow of oil through the groove, the bearing went completely dry and gripped the wrist pin so tightly that it was torn loose, and the convulsed motion of the engine, roughing the loose pin against the cylinder wall like a cold chisel, soon scored the cylinder so badly that it had to be rebored, or at least patched by a patented process. To do this the motor had to be taken down, cleaned and emptied and the block hauled to town, left a few days, and hauled back.

The motor made out that let you off so easy. You can be glad you didn't get a "strained or broken crankshaft" along with the rest.

Funny, too, isn't it, if you come to think about it? You put six months' income into a car and bring it home for the family to admire. It's admirable, all right. It's more admirable than one man in a thousand ever stops to recall. It's the embodiment of every principle known to mechanics, from high tension to hydraulics; it's the apex of the most modern standardized perfection. With honest-to-goodness care, its normal life will run from fifty to a hundred thousand miles—and it may be much longer.

But at 10,000 it has reached the dangerous years, and at 20,000 it is swiftly sinking into senile debility. You can't break the commandments and stay young—not without a painful lot of expensive overhauling, anyhow.

Know your oil and stick to the best brand.

SAVING OUR SCENERY

No one cares to visit a land that has been denuded of its forests and where in the places where healthy trees once stood, blackened stumps stand out against the sky. The scenic value of Michigan's forests cannot be over-estimated, not alone as to their lure to the tourist, but for their fascination for the home folk as well.

Many persons who are now citizens of our state have been attracted here by our wonderful scenery. Should we destroy that scenery many would probably go elsewhere to make their homes. We are living in a day when people desire pleasant surroundings.

Take your pleasure in the scenery with the landscape architect's eye. It has trees and the other has not, and place them on the market. You will find that the one with the trees will not only sell quicker, but will bring more. Trees are worth money and now is the time for the citizens of Michigan to invest in them a little.

A few dollars spent in planting trees today will bring you big returns

Twenty-five years from now, Michigan should be what scenery she has now and create more by planting trees.

The Seniors plan a trip to Cadillac Thursday. They will drive and have dinner there and motor back late in the afternoon.

The Junior class will drive to Mackinaw Wednesday and from there take the boat to Mackinac Island, where they will tour the island and have dinner there and drive back later.

Committees of members of the Junior class have been appointed to decorate for commencement and class night.

Man's life—"School tablets, Aspirin tablets, stone tablets."

Julian—"What are you getting out of your car?"

Mary Esther—"About 50 miles to the set of fenders."

It is rather amusing to note that some women teach very little boy to talk.

Pauline—"Which travels faster, heat or cold?"

Marg. H.—"Heat."

Pauline—"Why?"

Marg.—"Because we can catch cold."

Mr. Ford is satisfied with a quick, safe turnover. Some of his friends would also desire this on a frosty morning.

I lost my canary yesterday.

A luller snort I heard.

He flew out of my ink bottle.

Frederick—"A myth is a female moth."

If a seedling is a young tree, what's an inkling?

There are two sides to every argument—Miss Supernau's and the right side.

Elizabeth—"The baby swallowed a bottle of ink."

Mrs. Hughes—"Incredible."

Elizabeth—"No, indelible."

Ethel—"Did you ever flunk in chemistry?"

Isbrand—"Well, rather I got zero in the final."

Ethel—"Oh, I see, one of those fellows who stop at nothing."

RANKERS ALL SET FOR ROBBERIES

More vigilantes than would form a battalion and a half of infantry have already been enlisted in thirty-seven of the eighty-three counties of the state, to combat bank robbers according to the statement of Paul J. Ulrich, St. Clemens, chairman of the Banker's state protective committee.

Over fifteen hundred men, especially selected for their fitness, have been divided into units of three men each and distributed over the counties at strategic points.

Although the standard equipment of these vigilantes, Mr. Ulrich stated, consists of a Graig rifle, .45 calibre revolver and plenty of ammunition, many counties are supplementing this equipment with shot guns and riot guns.

Unless we concede at the start, Chairman Ulrich said, "that a literal state of warfare at present exists between the bandit and the banker, we will not get very far in our plans."

For this reason we are putting the vigilantes on a war footing as rapidly as possible. Rifle and pistol practice will be held within a very short time, former army officers are being selected to head up the county vigilante committees and an accurate survey of the country around each banking community has been made.

We have already organized a belt of vigilantes clean across the state and have surrounded all the larger cities with a network of armed men who will maintain any effort of the bandits to seek refuge in the metropolitan areas.

In Grand Rapids and Hastings we have stationed two aeroplanes manned by experienced pilots who will be able to fly at a moment's notice to any part of the state where a robbery is reported. These planes are equipped with machine guns and the pilots, flying low, will be able to halt any feeble bandits as well as survey the obscure places where they might hide.

At the present time over forty thousand dollars in rewards have been posted over the state, according to Joseph Rylands, director of organization for the bankers.

The counties organized so far are offering the reward to anyone who will tip off the vigilantes that a raid is to be made by bandits as well as to those who aid in capturing or killing them, Rylands said. "By offering the rewards for advance information about contemplated bank robberies, we will be able to form ambuscades and veritable death traps to meat the robbers when they arrive," Rylands stated.

MAKES NO GRAND-STAND PLAY AT EXPENSE OF FLOOD SUFFERERS

Despite the invitations of some well-intentioned—but unthinking friends and of trap-laying enemies, the President of the state—made rare show of the pitiful sufferings and privations in the flood area by visiting that territory. This again is one of the times that we can thank Providence that in Calvin Coolidge we have no self-advertising, publicity seeking tom-tom beating chief executive. This is the time to thank Providence that when a national emergency arises, the President picks a man competent to handle the task, gives them every ounce of his support and encouragement, but trusts and demands that they do the work.

From a press agent's standpoint, a visit of the President to the Michigan flood area could be made a world-beating publicity stunt. With the proper use of movie camera, he could be photographed on a hundred dikes and in a hundred different poses. He could be shown comforting the weak, personally directing the toiling workmen, and even making direct rescue of people from the flood. Once again let us rejoice that his genuine anxiety for the safety, comfort and solace of these people makes such postures absolutely abhorrent to him.

In his office at Washington almost hourly he has reports of each development. From his office at Washington he is able to authorize instantly the unloading of the stores of the army and navy depots and the employment not only of the material and supplies, but of the necessary men. Already, under his hands a program for immediate relief has been organized, but equally important he has already started the development of a comprehensive flood control program which Congress will later be called upon to develop.

SHIPMENTS BEGUN ON NEW NASH 4-PASSENGER COUPE

Initial shipments of the new Nash 4-passenger coupe are being made by the Nash Motors Company to dealers throughout the country. While announcement of the new model was made two months ago, this is the first opportunity the public has had to view the car. Those who have seen it say the 4-passenger coupe is the "most perfect specimen of Nash body craftsmanship" ever presented to the public, and dealers report an unusual heavy demand.

The genuine walnut steering wheel with comfortable grip matches the inlaid walnut window panel, the crown panel of genuine walnut above the instrument board, and the walnut finished board.

The new coupe is beautifully lacquered in two shades of green.

A new note has been struck in the appearance and arrangement of the nickel-plated bars which grace the rear deck. Instead of short bars of nickel, three long, handsome highly nickel-plated bars run the length of the rear deck and the third one crosses over, lending a decorative and substantial effect. At the rear of the car, opening on the curb side, is a large luggage compartment with ample space for carrying golf clubs, parcels and packages. The door is equipped with a strong lock and key. The rear window, looking out onto the rumble seat, may be lowered by a simple turn of an attractive silver-finished window lift. The windshield, too, opens forward by the turn of a regulator, placed within easy reach of the driver's hand. Silver-finished hardware, in period design, is used throughout.

When Little Ben Zeen came home from school yesterday his mother says to him, "Ben," says she, "you go right straight down and have your hair cut," she says. "It looks terrible," she says. "It's pretty n long enough to braid," she says. "Aw, now," says Ben. "I don't want to get it cut," he says. "Well, forever more," says Maggie. "Why not?" she says. "Because," says he. "I don't want to look like a girl," he says.
